Incredibly creepy. Don't see it alone.
And if you do, don't go to bed alone.

On Dec. 15, 1995, Steven Avkast and Locus Wheeler, the hosts of a cable access show called "Fact or Fiction", went into the Pine Barrens of New Jersey. Aided by Rein Clackin and Jim Suerd, they were going to do the first live broadcast in search of the legendary Jersey Devil.

Only Suerd came out alive.

It took the police two days to find the bodies.

It took the coroner four days to put the pieces back together.

It took the jury one and a half hours to sentence Suerd to life in prison.

One year later, filmmaker David Leigh decided to make a movie about it.

Using the footage shot by the four, he discovered the truth about what really happened that night. A truth more horrifying than was ever imagined.

...a masterpiece.
